

Basics of Adventure Tourism in Vietnam

Adventure tourism is a very fast-growing sector in the tourism industry which offers people to visit remote and exotic places and do some different kinds of activities which leaves them entirely satisfied and rejuvenated. People who are looking to do something new or try something different are opting for this kind of tourism. It is not easy to define adventure tourism in a phrase or a single line because it offers a vast range of things to try and do. Some of the things associated with adventure tourism are thrill, dare, rough journey, challenge, risk and excitement. It can involve going for an expedition, doing some risky sports activity, visiting a small place for its rich cultural heritage or exploring the rich flora and fauna of a jungle. The duration of the travel does not matter, what is important is that it gives the person a chance to do something out of the box. It can give a person not only a sense of adventure but also a sense of fulfillment and recreation. Adventure tourism gives a person chance for exploration, sport activities, nature travels, study and sightseeing.

The growing popularity of adventure tourism stems from the fact that it gives a person to do something very different from the grind of daily routine. It might involve taking some risk, overcoming some challenges, doing some physical activity or just experiencing a different culture. Some of the most famous forms of adventure tourism are – Mountaineering, Trekking, Rock Climbing, Water Sports, Jungle Tours, Rafting etc. Sometimes such travels include some risks for which the tourism operators take proper care.

Nature tourism, ecotourism, activity tourism and wildlife tourism, though individual sectors in tourism, they all overlap with adventure tourism at some point. All these forms of tourism include some form of risk taking, preparing for the unknown and in certain cases undertaking some form of training.

Technology also plays a major part in the growing popularity of this kind of tourism. Today the tourism operators are also understanding the growing needs of people towards such travels and offering visits with Vietnam visa on arrival to such places and locations which were earlier unknown from the tourism point of view. The growing number of social networking sites, online albums and other information sites make it very easy to share the information about a room at hotels in Nha Trang, a very remote place or an adrenaline pumping activity.
